Nobile's Fate, Italian Record for Sustained Flight, Hop of Southern Cross Hold Spotlight.

Boisterous Balkans Engage in Demonstrations Against Italy; Poincare Rides to New Victory.

China and the frozen north continued to furnish the high interest in the foreign events of last week.

On the one hand, the nations' glances were turned toward the forward march of the southern nationalist forces on the ancient Manchurian capital of Peking.

On the other, five European governments joined in preparing expeditions to search for the missing Italian north pole explorer, General Nobile, and his companions on the dirigible Italia.

These were Italy, Norway, Sweden, Russia and Germany.

Help may still be sent by the United States, as there were reports of a possible relief expedition which would include Lincoln Ellsworth and Captain Roald Amundsen, who were with Nobile on the successful north pole flight of 1926.

At the same time other, though less momentous, happenings took place in foreign fields. Aviators played an important part in these. The Pacific ocean was crossed again by air, and the world's duration record in the air was broken in Italy.

Fear Boxer Repetition.

The demonstrations in Austria the previous week against the Italian flag were outside in Jugoslavia last week.

Premier Poincare's chamber of deputies renewed its youth at Paris. The deputies were elected on Poincare's financial policy and several hundred new faces were discernible when the house went into session.

Marshall Chang Tso-lin, the northern dictator, was on the move at the weekend. The encircling armies of the southern leaders swept into Chihli, a vast province comprising an area of 115,000 square miles, with a population of nearly 30,000,000 people, as estimated by the Chinese customs.

The former Manchurian war lord spoke his valedictory to the assembled diplomats, made ready to leave his territory over which he once held supreme sway, and took his departure from the capital.

A great exodus from Peking began, foreign residents making haste to withdraw from the city which they expected soon to be in the hands of the nationalists. Some of them remembered the Boxer rising and the sack of Peking in 1900. But conditions in 1928 were considered by those in close touch with Chinese affairs to be of entirely different nature than those of 28 years ago, when the attack on Peking and the foreign legations

SLAYING OF YOUTH
IN OHIO VILLAGE
REMAINS MYSTERY

Massillon, Ohio, June 3.—(AP)—Police were baffled tonight by the mysterious killing of Lester Boyd, 17, member of a prominent family of Westbrook field, Massillon suburb, who was shot to death last night a few minutes after he had left a girl friend, Miss Ellen Fichter, 17, whom he escorted home from a school party.

A passing motorist found the body huddled along the walk, near the girl's home.

The police are entirely without clues. It was at first believed that some jealous youth might have been responsible for the slaying, but this theory was exploded by Miss Fichter. The girl said she had no other friends who could have wished to harm Boyd, and that she was only acquainted with the youth through his friendship for Peter Fichter, her brother.

Counsel for Mrs. Hornady Says Question Will Be Carried to Supreme Court.

MRS. IRVING THOMAS
ISSUES STATEMENT

Explains That Mrs. Hornady Reluctantly Agreed To Nomination Plans When Friends Urged.

BY SAM W. SMALL.

Special Staff Correspondent.

Washington, June 3.—(Special).—It is semi-officially given out that President Coolidge, with his summer vacation personal staff, will leave the white house in the afternoon hours of June 15.

In the evening of Monday, the 11, he is to deliver his annual address to the workers in the government departments, in conjunction with explanations of the budget appropriations by General Herbert M. Lord, the director of the budget.

Unless the president changes his reported intention, or the report concerning it is totally wrong, he will take advantage of the occasion to stress to the workers in Uncle Sam's enormous work-shops the imperative necessity to prove themselves, every one of them, officially faithful, efficient and economical with the public work devolved upon them.

Such a declaration, publicly made and broadcast on the very eve of the organization of the republican national convention at Kansas City, would have a sensational and probably determining effect upon the morale and actions of that body.

Coolidge Is Clear Out of It.

The interpretation given to me is that it would be noticed to the whole country that President Coolidge has informed the potential administration representatives in the convention that

Council To Pass on Proposal for Pay Ward at Grady Hospital This Afternoon.

City council today is faced with the problem of deciding whether or not it will make possible the immediate acceptance of the Jacob Elsas offer for the establishing of a pay ward at Grady hospital by putting $100,000 on the June finance sheet for that purpose, or of waiting until fall when voters will pass upon a bond issue which will include in its provisions a sum of money for this purpose. If the body approves of the recommendations by the committee on hospitals that the sum be put on the June sheet and that another $100,000 be asked from Fulton county it will doubtless mean that work will be started soon on the pay ward and that the city will be assured of the benefit of the Elsas offer. If, however, the council does not approve this movement it will mean that the offer will not be passed upon until fall with the resultant danger that the offer may be withdrawn.

Other matters which will be considered at today's meeting will be the question of the bond issue as a whole, bids for the construction of a new viaduct on Mitchell street at Terminal station, and the election of a city clerk.

It is expected that the present city clerk, Walter Taylor, will be re-elected as no opposition to such a move has as yet developed.

The bond issue will be submitted by

Rain Predicted For City Today By Weatherman

With a stern and unrelenting eye, the weather man of the national weather bureau in Washington, Sunday night, cast his gaze in the direction of Atlanta and predicted rain for Atlanta today and Tuesday, with no "ifs" or "perhapes."

Although the clouds frowned on the city Sunday, only occasional showers fell. Temperatures during the day ranged from a minimum of 68 degrees to a maximum of 82 degrees.

Noble's Fate Mystery. The present nationalist movement has developed in a systematic and more or less responsible way. Then, too, Japan has been accorded a comparatively free hand by the powers in giving protection to foreign interests and making ready for any disorders or bloodshed that may follow the withdrawal into Manchuria of Chang Tso-lin and the northern armies. No word came out of the north of Noble and his courageous crew. Had all gone well they would have returned from the north pole to their base at King Bay, Nansen, but for more than a week the north has been silent.

Norway, land of a hardy race, was quick to answer the call, and relief parties were organized and are even now completing preparations for a search of the wastes of ice over an area where meteorological and arctic experts figure the Italia may have met disaster. Italy delayed her preparations, in the hope of establishing by means of the early expeditions, such as that carried out by Noble's base ship Citta Di Milano, more definite information on the whereabouts of the missing men and dirigible.

Southern Cross Feat.

Sweden and Germany, as well as Russia, are making every effort to aid in the task, which, as the days pass and the warmer weather approaches, becomes more and more difficult. The crew of the three-motored Fokker plane Southern Cross, composed of two Americans and two Australians, made a remarkable trans-Pacific flight from California to Hawaii—approximately 2,400 miles in less than 28 hours. They are on their way now from Hawaii to Suva, Fiji Islands, en route to Australia, nearly 8,000 miles from the California coast. They found the Pacific, which has claimed many lives from the air in the last year, in good mood, and they completed this leg of their flight almost exactly on time and with hardly a sputter.

Not so satisfactory was the attempt of the Spanish aviators, Captains Iglesias and Jimenez, to fly without stopping from Spain to Karachi, India. They came down at Nasiriyah, Mesopotamia, and thereby lost their chance for the long distance record.

Anti-Italian Rioting

Two Italians, Major Ferrarin and Captain Del Prete, however broke the world's record for duration in the air near Rome. They remained up for some more than 58 hours, passing by several hours the previous record held by the Americans, Capt. Haldeman and Eddie Stinson. The anti-Italian demonstrations in Yugoslavia were of a most serious nature, particularly in Belgrade, where the people passed one night of terror. Scores of wounded civilians, police and gendarmes resorted to their savage character. Other places in Yugoslavia were the scene of similar disorders. As generally explained the trouble arose out of antagonism to the conventions negotiated at Nettuno, Italy, three years ago, whereby Italians were permitted to acquire land along Yugoslavia's coast. The conventions were to come before parliament for ratification, and agitators, mostly students, forestalled such action by their manifestations. Probably other elements entered into the equation, for ill-feeling has existed for a long time between Italy and Yugoslavia.

U. S. Soldier Honored.

Mussolini, Italy's strenuous premier, promised a statement soon before the Italian chamber on foreign relations, with special reference to Austria and Yugoslavia. But, in the meantime, the governments of both these countries condemned the action of their nationals, offered full apologies, and Yugoslavia promised reparation to all concerned. With the new French chamber in session, Premier Poincare takes the center of the stage. He controls by a comfortable majority and it is believed this body at this session that the premier is expected to present his plan for stabilization of the franc. Memorial day in Europe gave testimony to the honor in which American soldiers and sailors who died in war are held. In France and England flowers were heaped on the graves and tributes were paid to the men who had fallen. Russia welcomed back to his motherland Maxim Gorky. Of Russian life Gorky has written much; against Russian governments Gorky had raised his voice. He had gone away to Italy for several years, but returned to see again conditions at first hand and set down his views on "The New Russia."

Local Boy Scout Starts Epic Trip To Africa Sunday

Douglas Oliver, Jr., Atlanta Boy Scout, started the first stage of his long journey to Africa, where he will go "camera hunting" with the Martin Johnsons, when he left Atlanta for New York at 8 o'clock Sunday morning. Douglas will arrive in New York today where he will be met by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and Scout Commissioner West.

His mother, Mrs. W. K. Duncan, and his three-year-old sister, Lucy Malinda Duncan, will leave Atlanta Tuesday and will join the boy in New York Wednesday, remaining with him until he sails Saturday. Douglas and the other two scouts who have been picked to go on the trip will spend this week in New York being entertained by scouts of that city and by Colonel Roosevelt. They will sail Saturday on the Ile de France for Africa. The trip is being financed by George W. Putnam, New York publisher.

Mr. Saunders is opposed by Thomas Jones, Mr. Stinchcomb by Joseph Berman and F. A. Hollingsworth, and Mr. Bowden by Tom Morris.

Other ward contests are council from the sixth ward, in which Councilman Harry York, incumbent, is opposed by Thomas White; W. Garland Cooper, incumbent, and Sam Johnson, for council from the tenth ward, and J. Ira Harrelson and Hyman M. Morris, for the board of education from the fourth ward.

LET'S BE FAIR ABOUT IT!

Former Congressman Upshaw, of Georgia, in speaking from Kansas platforms in the attempt to form a "political and moral" alliance between the dry west and the "dry south." He wants to "cut loose" from the east.

Kansas was the last stand of the South-haters.

While Mr. Upshaw, who admits that he is a paid lecturer for the Anti-Saloon league, and along with Senator "Tom" Hefflin, may also be the field agent for another organized political group, has not admitted in Kansas that his direct purpose, along with other insurgents, is to incite a bolt at the Houston convention in the event of the nomination of some one not in sympathy and accord with the views and the intolerances of those for whom he speaks, it has been openly and repeatedly charged that such is his "assignment," and it is known, without possibility of challenge, that the former Georgia congressman has repeatedly said he personally will not support the nominee of his party if Governor Smith, of New York, is the nominee.

While Kansas, and other states of the west, were boldly and defiantly prodding the south with the hot tongs of inquisition and hatred long after the smoke of the war had passed, instead of helping a bleeding and distressed section to rehabilitate, it was the east that extended open arms of amity and of economic help.

It was the great financial interests of New York that not only gave, but voluntarily proffered the funds for the re-establishment of southern institutions and enterprises, and even for the rebuilding of southern farms and southern rural communities.

But for the east, in those trying days, the development of the south would be 50 years behind its economic status of today.

A great deal has been ill-advisedly said, by way of criticism and abuse to Tammany, by those who threaten to bolt the party if they cannot have their way.

We hold no brief for Tammany, but history will bear out the statement that Tammany has always been the loyal and unyielding friend of the south. Among its members have been, and are today, large numbers of southern men of prominence in the economic and professional life of New York—men whose honor and integrity no person dare to challenge.

When the south made a supreme effort to preserve herself, looking to the democratic party as her hope, she turned to Tammany, and found friendly aid, and a shelter of refuge. The first democratic convention, after the war between the states, was held in Tammany hall in 1868, and these sectional lines were obliterated, and there, too, Seymour and Blair, friends of Tammany and friends of the south, were nominated. In their speeches of acceptance they made the definite and unqualified statements that Dixie should be handed back to Dixie, and that "scalawags and carpet-baggers" should be hurled out of southern place and power.

We hold no malice against Kansas. In the course of retributive law Kansas subsequently "bled," and Georgia, and other southern states, helped their distressed brothers, and they would gladly do again.

But as between Kansas and New York, with the south's close commercial affiliations, past and present, with the east it would be folly, indeed, for it to turn its back on a friend that was a friend indeed in time of need, for an alliance that promises nothing.

Senator George, of Georgia, will be placed before the Houston convention for the democratic nomination.

tion. We earnestly and sincerely hope that he may be nominated. There is not a more loyal democrat in America. It is noticeable that not one word, or one suggestion, has come from him that he is in the slightest degree sympathetic with any possible move that may be made to bolt the party in any eventuality. Those who know him, his fairness, his integrity, his Americanism, his allegiance to the party, know that he would frown upon such a suggestion from any source.

Let us be fair! Reason and good judgment should supplant impulsiveness. As for us, we are willing to trust the representative voice of a two-third vote of a great sovereign national convention, and be governed by, and support such a voice.

RELIEF FOR THE LIBRARY.

Raleigh Drennon, chairman of the library committee of city council, announced after a meeting of the committee at the library that plans were made by the committee to ask council to provide relief for the crowded conditions at the main library and for a larger maintenance fund for the library system. Mr. Drennon pointed out that the present library building had been serving the city for over twenty-five years and that it was no longer adequate to take care of the work of the library; that other southern cities were making handsome provision for their public library and Atlanta's library from being the ranking library in the south was in danger of being outstripped by other southern cities not nearly as large as Atlanta.

In the last few weeks Dallas, Texas, has issued $500,000 in bonds for branch libraries alone; Birmingham has built a library in the last year at a cost of $730,000; Baltimore has voted $5,000,000 for a new building; Houston, Texas, has just finished a library costing $500,000; Mobile, Ala., is completing a library at a cost of $250,000; Memphis, Tenn., has enlarged its library building in the last few years. And all from public funds while in all the thirty years of Atlanta's library the city has spent less than $24,000 for library buildings.

Mr. Drennon pointed out further that the appropriation for maintenance of the Atlanta library was not keeping pace with the growth of the work. He pointed out that whereas the work of the library had increased 40 per cent in the last five years, the number on the staff had only increased 20 per cent. A larger staff is absolutely necessary if the service is to be maintained.

It was also brought out that the salaries paid the Atlanta librarians are very low, and that no increases are provided for years of satisfactory service, and that the initial salaries are much smaller here than is the prevailing rate, while the salary paid the librarian is the lowest paid anywhere in the country for a city of this size and is less than small towns all over the south are paying.

This is discreditable to Atlanta, and Councilman Drennon should be warmly supported in his effort to improve the city's library status.

COMMISSIONER PERRY.

It appears that James A. Perry will have no opposition for reelection as a member of the Georgia public service commission, of which he is chairman. He should have none, for his splendid record entitles him to the vote of confidence that would be carried in his reelection.

It is of particular importance at this time that men of seasoned experience should serve on the commission, for there are several matters of unusual interest now pending before the commission, among them being Atlanta's depot problem, in the solution of which the state is vitally interested.

Mr. Perry's service on the commission has been characterized by his fairness to all interests; he has demanded that the public be protected, and that its welfare be given primary consideration, while at the same time he has proceeded upon the theory that the public utilities has rights that must be respected. Any fair-minded man must agree with the justice of this attitude.

We do not believe that Mr. Perry will have any opposition—he certainly should have none, for the state never had a more efficient official.

A stenographer in a Jacksonville hotel kissed 105 Shriners in as many minutes when a delegation passed through that city and dined at a hotel where she functioned. Asked about the sensation she replied, "I can't tell. It's Masonic."

We may win our bet yet. The vice president has one more session to preside over and he may cuss then.

One easy snap this summer will be that of the secretary of the chamber of commerce of Brule, Wisconsin.

The conventions give the paragon occasion for a lot of dry humor.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Joyous Entrance.

One of the clearest signs that Belgium has returned to normal national life are the return of popular festivities and the crowds on the railway trains on Sundays. From early medieval times the people of the southern Netherlands have had an extraordinary liking for processions, plays in the market squares and the colorful spectacles of the "Germesse." Celebrations stopped altogether during the war, of course, but they have slowly been reviving. Princess Astrid's coming has given new impetus to her husband, the Duke of Brabant, who is touring the country and has just made a "joyous entrance" at Liege and Antwerp. Nobody suspected that there were so many flags and so much huzzing in all Christendom. Historic processions were re-enacted for the benefit of the royal visitors or rather their visit was made the occasion for an old-fashioned popular rejoicing. The squares were filled with the aroma of waffles and oliebollen (oil cakes). Barbary organs crashed out the Brabanconne and thousands of burgundy dancers from the charleston in public. The burgomaster of Antwerp, in robes of gold chain made a speech in which he predicted that his country would be the biggest port on the continent, as it was in the past, and unheard of numbers of thousands of people were in taverns and homes. On Sundays everybody makes a trip again and the casual traveler is forced to witness the extraordinary phenomenon of everybody seemingly knowing everybody else in Flanders. It trains pull into a station, the air rings at once with shouts of welcome and recognition and even if two trains going in opposite directions, stop simultaneously at the same station, windows are lowered and the handshaking begins over the space between the tracks.

One of the first results of the institution of the cinema control commission in France, chiefly the result of the prohibition of French movie producers against the importation of American pictures, is the formation of independent groups of movie fans who hire a theater and show films selected by themselves. Several films have been imported from Russia in this manner. The French call them "Les Amateurs de Spartacus" and have been shown to members of the "club." Paris is not the only city where this is done. There are "Friends of Spartacus" in many localities and new centers are being formed each year. The revolutionary association, known as the "Friends of Spartacus" and films from Russia have naturally resulted in charges being leveled of a subversive nature. These, however, cannot be substantiated. It is the same as if there were an association of friends of the Russian theater in New York who sponsored the importation of a troupe of the Moscow Art studio. A man may conceivably delight in performances by the Russian and American artists, and he may even be in sympathy with communism. The "Friends of Spartacus" are meeting with such a large reception, however, that the French producers are alarmed. Just after having abrogated the so-called "domination" of Hollywood, they begin to question the influence of the Russian and American films. Yet it does not seem to occur to them that the only remedy against foreign imports is to import the best of our product and place it on a level where competition cannot hurt the industry any longer.

"Is That Glory?" The greatest difficulty is always encountered when anybody wants to interview Marshal Joffre. The trouble is the interviewer can ask a hundred questions and the old soldier simply nods his head as in token of assent to all of them. Lately a M. Rene Benjamin, "one of the glories of French journalism," has tried to interview Joffre. He had a try, but Joffre had met with a country notary who had been a Joffre student at college with "Papa" Joffre. The notary, of course, was not to be penetrated into the marshal's sanctum at the war school. The notary talked, telling Joffre's life story, pausing occasionally to say if the interviewer had any questions. The notary would not continue the narrative with some reminiscences of his own. But no such luck for M. Benjamin. Joffre's questions were asked in all. Of all of them "Papa" Joffre nodded or mumbled a monosyllabic answer: "Oui." One day, he exclaimed: "You have been appointed commander-in-chief. Ah, that was a great day for me. And for you, too, I suppose. You asked, turning to the marshal, 'Oui,' murmured Joffre. 'That day I sang the Marseillaise, all in honor of you. You had just been promoted to come for me.' Joffre did not reply. He flicked some ashes from the table cloth and his eyes strayed to the wall opposite. His wife followed the old man's glances. The eyes of the three men came to rest upon a long row of portraits. The helmets were picked up on the battlefield, their owners had been killed. 'Glory?' murmured Joffre. 'The glory?' (Copyright, 1928, by The Constitution.)

After the civil war, who but Tammany first came to the aid of the south? It was Tammany who, in 1876, in the person of a constitutional rights, in 1876 southern elections were conducted by United States soldiers, on guard with bayonets fixed. The polls looked like small arsenals. Then it was that New York, Connecticut, New Jersey and Indiana repudiated this policy of coercion, giving warning to the republican party that it would not be defeated unless the south were treated fairly. Who, indeed, but Tammany assisted in defeating the Force Bills of 1875 and of 1890, bills which would have put the south under bayonet rule and created a new orgy of corruption?

The history of Tammany is a romance. Without being a political organization it made possible Jeffersonian democracy in America.

On May 12, 1890, a noisy procession with drums and banners went crashing down the streets of New York.

John Pintard, Tammany scribe, was in the van, wearing upon his head a liberty cap and around his waist wampum, highly colored Indian beads and bearing aloft a tomahawk. It was St. Tammany's day, and the braves were celebrating the event—Protestants, Catholics, Jews, Irish, mechanics, laborers and the down-and-outs—a Falstaff's army.

Claude Bowers informs us in his "Jefferson and Hamilton" what took place as the procession passed the office of Alexander Hamilton. The office of the great statesman was empty, and the ignorant, unlettered mob, exclaiming: "What a grotesque spectacle!"

The fust and feathers of the Indian warriors and the uncouth setting of this ragmuffin crowd struck the Tories as ridiculous.

But there was one man in New York that day with other emotions—Thomas Jefferson saw in that inarticulate, ineffective, commonplace mob the friends of democracy, a nucleus of victory over the federalists, a voice, an arm, a rostrum, and he proceeded to utilize the opportunity.

Forming an alliance with Tammany "braves," as individuals, but not with the society as an organization, Jefferson swept the country in November, almost putting an end to the federalist party.

With thousands of other personal friends, and still other thousands who perhaps do not know them personally but who have watched their splendid services to humanity in channels of education, I rejoice at the recognition that Emory university is preparing to give to Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of the Georgia School of Technology, and to Samuel C. Dobbs, Atlanta philanthropist.

In conferring upon each of them the honorary degree of doctor of laws this great institution will honor itself, and honor two of Georgia's most worthy and useful citizens.

In public educational service, Dr. Brittain stands out like a beacon in the night, for he was fighting for a more substantial recognition of the state's institutions, for educational coordination, for intellectual freedom, when the way was dark.

In this work I first knew him. Indeed, I met him in his office in the capitol many years ago, when he was the state school superintendent, by

Just in Passing

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON.

The senate committee investigating pre-convention campaign funds and expenditures learned something Saturday in its questioning of George W. Olvany, scribe of the Ancient and Honored, "Tammany society," that might serve an intellectual purpose if it was more generally known.

Mr. Olvany was entirely correct in declaring that the "Tammany society" is not a political organization in any sense of the word.

It was organized more than a hundred years ago as a patriotic fraternal organization to administer to the poor and needy, and to see that the institutions of our government making every person equal before the law; guaranteeing freedom of press, speech and assembly; freedom of religion; and separation of church and state, should not be abused.

Very naturally it became in time a democratic institution, per se, because its ideals, particularly as to the tenets of constitutional government, the rights of states, the decentralization of government, the sovereignty of the people, were in keeping with the faith of the democratic party as founded by Jefferson and augmented in strength by Jackson.

The "Tammany society" received its name from an Indian chief. It has existed around the Gibraltar of freedom, and the ideals of the inherent, Americanism, as represented by the original race of the new world forests.

The New York democratic committee is a "Tammany society" subsidiary organization, and always has been and always will be. It has had its headquarters in Tammany hall, the home of the society on Fourteenth street, for generations. Therefore, the public has known the New York city democratic organization as "Tammany"—and right well has it served, both as a friend of the oppressed, and as a firm, courageous, compact, and almost invincible force in New York city politics.

Judge Robert W. Winston, of North Carolina, distinguished as an author, and particularly for his recent published biography of Andrew Johnson, of Tennessee, a man who had been hated in the south because he loved the union when war threatened it, and in the north because he would not hate the south when war had ended, had a notable article in the June Review of Reviews on "Tammany Hall and the South."

Among many striking illustrations of the friendliness of this great and powerful society to the south, in the hours of her greatest stress, Judge Winston writes:

"After the civil war, who but Tammany first came to the aid of the south? It was Tammany who, in 1876, in the person of a constitutional rights, in 1876 southern elections were conducted by United States soldiers, on guard with bayonets fixed. In conferring upon each of them the honorary degree of doctor of laws this great institution will honor itself, and honor two of Georgia's most worthy and useful citizens.

In public educational service, Dr. Brittain stands out like a beacon in the night, for he was fighting for a more substantial recognition of the state's institutions, for educational coordination, for intellectual freedom, when the way was dark.

In this work I first knew him. Indeed, I met him in his office in the capitol many years ago, when he was the state school superintendent, by reason of being attracted by his official efforts with appeal to me as being peculiarly constructive.

If any man in the entire south deserves such splendid recognition for philanthropic and unselfish educational service, it is another good friend, Samuel C. Dobbs, Sr.—

And let me add that he has a son, Samuel, Jr., who is following in his father's footsteps, with the same keen interest in educational philanthropy, and particularly in lighting the pathways of the youth of the darkened mountain gorges.

Sam Dobbs has done much for Emory. He is the financial foundation upon which Reinhardt stands today.

It was my privilege to attend recently the graduating exercises of Reinhardt, which is one of the old and outstanding junior colleges of the state. I was never more impressed with the thoroughness of an institution, with the spirit of accomplishment, with the atmosphere of wholesomeness, with the impress of spirituality.

Mr. Dobbs is doing for the LaGrange Female college what he is doing for Reinhardt.

He is chairman of both boards, and their harbor of refuge in times of financial distress.

He is determined that both shall function in service to the fullness of their capacity.

It was a privilege to be present at a meeting of the board of trustees of Reinhardt—where assembled a score or more of outstanding men of Georgia.

I promised them that I would tell the story of this "lamp upon the hill" that sheds its radiance throughout Georgia, even to the sea. And, if nothing occurs to prevent, I shall do so at the first opportunity that time and space permit.

The young manhood and the young womanhood of Georgia constitute the state's finest and most sacred treasure.

Upon their shoulders must rest the responsibilities of tomorrow, for they constitute the vanguard of the oncoming generation.

They must be properly trained—in mind, in body, in heart.

They must be acquainted with the issues of life, the pitfalls.

They must have understanding that not only promotes ambition, but builds the right, and puts down the wrong.

It is vacation season—but the training must not stop.

Take an imperial rose from the nursery, plant it and then neglect it. Its thistles will sharpen but its fragrance will be swallowed up in the brambles, and then disappear forever.

God forbid that the human flowers of our land, whether from the homes of the wealthy of our cities, or from the humblest hut of the mountain cave, shall be lost in the bramble of human indifference!

All over Georgia announcements are being made for the forthcoming general assembly. It is both heartening and encouraging that so many good men of affairs are offering for service.

It looks now as if we will have assembled in 1929 one of the strongest legislatures known in Georgia in recent years.

I note that my friend, former Senator J. E. T. Bowden, is offering for the house in Ware county. He has served in both branches, and might be termed a veteran.

At any rate—although he and I are sometimes together and sometimes apart in state politics—he has stacked up a marvelously good and constructive record as a legislator.

He is honest, fair, vigorous, tireless, a strong debater, therefore a powerful advocate and a dangerous adversary.

"Jet" Bowden is a friend of education, and that is one reason I am writing this, for right now he is laboring with all of his skill and intellectual efficiency for the establishment of a great junior college at Waycross to serve as a feeder for the university system.

We need state junior colleges in order to break the trek from the high schools to the freshman classes.

The Methodists are building a great junior college at Valdosta as a feeder for Emory. I wish "Jet" and others engaged in advancing the Waycross project every possible success.

It is understood that Mr. Bowden has no announced opposition to his candidacy. If he does not have any of the people of Ware may feel entirely satisfied that the county will have in him, as one of the delegation, a man thoroughly worthy of the trust, and never unmindful of his county's interest.

This makes one think of my friend Luther Still, representative from Fulton, who has announced for reelection, having no opposition, and it is presumed will have none. He has only served one term, and he made a record that deserves enthusiastic endorsement of all the people.

In the primary of 1926 he received the highest number of votes cast in this county for legislative candidates. He ran without opposition, although prior to his announcement there were a number of other good and worthy citizens who gave the matter serious thought.

Luther Still is a representative of Emory primarily, for he is president of the Atlanta Typographical Union, to which position he was only recently re-elected. There is not a stronger or more patriotic or more useful group of citizens in Atlanta than his labor group. It is entitled to representation in the legislature and should always have it. But Luther Still represents the whole of Fulton county.

Business men sought his advice and counsel. He stood flatfootedly behind

THE SCENE OF THE CRIME.
A young woman writes:
I am a daily reader of your column and I find it dispels lots of doubts and helps to give one greater assurance.

Our annual vacation is threatened. We two girls aged 19 and 22, go to the eastern shore for two delightful weeks of outdoor life, each summer.

Just before Christmas a friend who visits at the shore came down with typhoid fever and died in February with what was called "typhoid kidneys." We know that he had typhoid, but not known but her family has a vague suspicion that she got the germ in drinking water.

Mother insists we cannot go to the shore unless we take the typhoid vaccination first. We don't want to take it. Shall we? We shall be guided by your answer. We usually have our vaccination in August. If you advise vaccination, when should we have it done, now or when we are ready to go to the country?

This mother knows her bacilli. Her daughters have considerable yet to learn from their best friend.

Certainly the girls should get the typhoid vaccine. It is a safe and effective means of protection against typhoid fever. It is a vaccine of typhobacterin or typhoid "vaccine."

Every man in the American expeditionary force received this immunizing treatment before he went to France, and the world war was the first time that it was used on a large scale. It is a vaccine of typhobacterin or typhoid "vaccine."

EMORY GLEE CLUB RAMSPECK ENTERS OPENS TOUR TODAY ASSEMBLY RACE

Off for its second European tour, the Emory University Glee club left Atlanta this morning at 7:40 o'clock for Savannah, where they will sing tonight, leaving for New York at midnight. In the metropolis the club will give a farewell concert in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel on Thursday night immediately preceding their sailing for England. After three months of almost solid bookings the club will return to New York September 10.

The previous tour of the club was a great success both in England and on the continent, and the one this year is being undertaken largely because of demands from many English cities for return engagements. The popularity of the club is well attested by the fact that "Colossus" in London, one of the biggest vaudeville houses in Europe, has booked the singers for two weeks with a possibility of the contract being extended three weeks.

Mayor Walker, of New York, will join in the "send off" program when the club sails.

The club personnel follows:

Brule, Wis., June 3.—(P.)—The 200 residents of this tiny village of 200 buildings and cabins today were riding on the greatest wave of prosperity in the community's history.

Since Brule was selected as the site of the summer white house, rents have skyrocketed 700 per cent. Trading for business sites was feverish.

Where the country highway turns at Waukegan toward Cedar Island lodge, where President Coolidge will spend the summer, there stands a small cabin, which was rented for $15 a month last year. Today the rental was $100 a month.

A 14-room house, formerly used as a hotel, recently was rented for $5 a month. Negotiations are under way for a sublease at an unannounced price.

A young woman from Milwaukee found an empty store which she sought to rent for a gift shop. The owner asked $15 a month.

"Well," replied the woman, "I'll have to ask my husband first. I'll let you know."

She returned the next day, but meanwhile others had bid the price to $100.

Robert Ramspeck, one of the most widely-known lawyers in DeKalb county, a resident of Decatur, has announced for the post of legislator in the general assembly of Georgia to succeed James C. Davis.

"For some time I have had an ambition to attain the honor of representing my native county of DeKalb in the general assembly of Georgia," Mr. Ramspeck said. "It now appears that one of the present representatives from DeKalb will not be a candidate for that position and I have therefore determined to offer for the place now held by the Hon. James C. Davis. If the people of DeKalb will honor me by election I pledge to them my best efforts to faithfully discharge the duties of the office."

Born in Decatur, Mr. Ramspeck was educated at the Donald Fraser school and at the public schools of Decatur and Griffin. He received his degree in law from the Atlanta Law school in 1920. Previous to that, he was deputy clerk of the DeKalb superior court from 1907 to 1911 and was chief clerk, postoffice house of representatives in 1911.

He held the post of chief deputy to the U. S. marshal from 1917 to 1919, and during his practice of law in 1920 and 1921, he also engaged in real estate, insurance, and building business. In 1922 he held the post of business manager of the DeKalb New Era, and was solicitor of the county court of Decatur from 1922 to 1926, inclusive.

Mr. Ramspeck at present is city attorney of Decatur and county administrator of DeKalb county. He is a member of the Delta Theta Phi law fraternity, having been dean of both the Wayne senate of the Atlanta Law school and of the Atlanta Alumni senate. During his senior year at the Atlanta Law school, he was president of the Kilpatrick society. He also is a member of the Stone Mountain, Atlanta and Georgia Bar associations, and of Atlanta Lawyers' club and the Commercial Law league of America. He is a director of the Decatur chamber of commerce.

BURGESS CHILDREN'S STORIES

THE SECRET IS DISCOVERED.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Longbill and Mrs. Longbill had kept their secret well. They intended to keep it until the time came when four fluffy little Longbills would come from those four eggs and mother would proudly lead them into the great world. No one knew where that nest was. More than once it had taken a great deal of courage to sit perfectly still. More than once Mrs. Longbill had heard the patter of feet and known that Reddy Fox was within jumping distance of her. To have taken to her wings would have meant giving her secret away to Reddy. So she had sat tight, not moving so much as a feather, and Reddy had passed on without knowing that she was there. One Lightfoot the Deer had jumped right over her. More than once Redtail the Hawk had sat in a tree right above her. It had taken courage—a great deal of courage—to sit still with enemies so near.

If you would save, not only food but worry, time and money

No one will seriously claim that there is any more efficient or sanitary method of preserving food than a high-grade refrigerator well filled with pure ice.

It is equally true that no one who realizes that interest on the initial investment, depreciation, upkeep, and the cost of current must all be considered when a comparison between the cost of ice and any mechanical substitute is being made, will fail to admit that ice is far and away the most economical of all refrigerants.

And then comes the question of time and convenience. If you are using Ice your Ice man is in your place for two or three minutes—possibly every day during the hot weather and possibly twice a week during the winter. And with the ice in your refrigerator nothing can possibly go wrong.

Ice scores heavily when considered from a standpoint of efficiency, sanitation, economy of time and money and convenience. And it gives you not only refrigeration, but actual ice for every purpose.

whole being. Still she remained guarding that precious secret. She wouldn't move until it was absolutely necessary. Nearer and nearer came that two-legged creature. She knew he hadn't seen her yet. Perhaps he would turn aside without seeing her. He was so close now that in one step more he would step on her. That would be the end of her and her secret. The two-legged creature was being foolish. With despair in her heart, she took to her wings, almost brushing the face of this two-legged creature as she rose into the air.

"A woodcock!" exclaimed Farmer Brown's boy, for that is who it was. "A woodcock!" That means a nest. That nest is close by, for that bird almost touched me as she rose. Ah, there it is! If I had taken another step, I should have crushed those eggs. Sure enough, right in front of him and almost at his feet, was a little clump of alders with four eggs. There wasn't much of a nest—just a few leaves in a little hollow in the soft ground. Farmer Brown's boy stooped over and examined the eggs, but he didn't touch them. He took care not to touch them. Then, very carefully, he withdrew.

Plea for Racial Forbearance Made By Doctor Moton

A plea for members of both races to assume an unselfish attitude toward each other for mutual help was made here today by Dr. Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee institute. At a joint conference of Spelman and Morehouse colleges, the speaker paid high tribute to the south as a supreme opportunity to show the world that two races radically different, can live side by side in peace and friendship and mutual helpfulness. Dr. Moton said, "We have yet to learn fully how to do it, but thousands of sincere people of both races here in the south are working at it honestly and encouraging progress is being made."

DIET AND HEALTH

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

E. Writing on March 2, asks me four questions and she ends up with the following: "I realize you have many letters to answer, and I will wait until June 1. If you have the answers appear in our paper the first week of June, this will give me time and I will be watching for same."

Such consideration and such faith deserve reward. I wish all of you would realize it may take three or four months before your answer can appear, and it cannot appear at all if it isn't of general interest. And even though it is of general interest, if I have recently answered a similar question, I have to omit it this time. I have enough letters in one mail to furnish material for the column for a year, really, so that you can see how impossible it is for all of you to be answered.

Here are E's questions and answers:

1. "Can you give the name of a reliable hair dye?"

Answer: No, E. I cannot give you names of hair dyes. My opinion in regard to their use, except in cases where the gray hair is a detriment to obtaining a position, is that they should not be used. You cannot know if they contain harmful ingredients or not. Gray hair is not necessarily a sign of age, and sometimes it is a great beautifier, softening the expression and lines.

2. "Will you name a good doctor book?"

Answer: We have a list of books on tuberculosis, a list on general diet, a list on diabetes, a list on children, any one of which you may secure by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope and two cents in return for the cover cost of printing and handling.

3. "How can I prevent falling of the hair during pregnancy?"

Answer: Proper prenatal care as to diet, exercise, rest, etc., coupled with the proper care of the scalp, will do the trick. I have an article on the diet during nursing and pregnancy and another on the care of the hair, which you can secure by following the rules above.

4. "Can a mother determine disposition, life work, etc., of a baby before birth—that is, educate the baby through the power of thought during pregnancy?"

Answer: "No, E., no more than she can mark the baby by scars. The only way that the power of thought could affect the baby would be for the mother to educate herself during that period along certain lines and continue that education and so mold the disposition and inclinations of the child. The real character of its brain cells in the line of its talents, etc., are determined in the germ plasma itself. The inheritance factors in the germ plasma are the result of the entire mental and physical life of the parents and their ancestors."

Protruding Ears.

Yes, protruding ears are very successfully remedied in the hand of a skillful plastic surgeon. I. As far as the cost is concerned, you have to see the surgeon about this, and explain that you are a working girl and are supporting your mother. Ring up the County Medical society and ask for a list of such surgeons.

W.—Yes, decaffeinated coffee is considered harmless. There are several brands.

A moderate amount of any kind of coffee is harmless to the majority. However, there are a few who seem to be susceptible to the caffeine which stimulates them and causes insomnia and perhaps other unpleasant symptoms, and for those the decaffeinated coffee is undoubtedly better.

Editor's Note: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in this column, in future issues. Requests for articles must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope and two cents in return for the cover cost of printing and handling. For the pamphlet in reducing a gaining, ten cents in coin with fully s. a. s. must be enclosed. Address Dr. Peters in care of The Atlanta Constitution.

Milledgeville Ready For White Way Fete

Milledgeville, Ga., June 3.—(Special.)—Milledgeville hung the welcome sign out today and threw its doors wide open with the key to the city hanging on the outside for the thousands of visitors expected here tomorrow when Milledgeville will celebrate the completion of its white way and moving program began about a year ago.

Chairman Horne announced that everything is ready and the town will be turned over to the visitors. The program includes a barbecue, street dance and hundreds of other features. Dignitaries from all sections of the state have been invited and many of them have signified their intentions of being present. Arrangements have been made to show the invited guests over the city and to the state institutions and other points of interest for which Milledgeville is noted.

The city was filled with visitors today, here for the commencement of the Georgia State College for Women, and many of them are expected to remain through tomorrow evening for the gala celebration.

More than 2,000 pounds of Baldwin county raised hogs are ready for the pit and quantities of side dishes that have made Georgia "famous" are ready for the feast. A large cafeteria has been constructed for the serving of the guests. The "one will be served" at 6 o'clock followed by a brief address of welcome from officials of the city.

Two blocks bordering on the campus of G. S. C. W. will be roped off for the dancing. The Georgia Power company band with an old-time fiddlers' orchestra will furnish music for the occasion. The dance will include those of today as well as the square dances and cotillions of other days.

The occasion of the gala celebration is the completion of more than 30 blocks of paving and the erection of a white way along six blocks in the heart of the city. The progressive program was undertaken more than a year ago and now that it is completed all Milledgeville is ready to join in and celebrate this achievement.

Stewart Defense Will Begin Today

Washington, June 3.—(AP)—The defense of Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil company, of Indiana, will get under way tomorrow in his trial on charges of having declined to answer questions regarding the Continental Trading company oil deal propounded to him last February by members of the senate oil committee.

Stewart's quietest of lawyers were in conference tonight mapping out their program of attack and witnesses to be called. Frank J. Hogan, head of the legal staff, would not announce the names of witnesses, but said they would not exceed half a dozen.

Two of these are expected to be newspaper men—Elliott Thurston, correspondent of the New York World, and Paul V. Anderson, writer for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. In his opening statement to the jury last night, Mr. Hogan contended the questions asked his client by Senator Nye, republican, North Dakota, chairman of the senate committee, last February 2, repeated the next day were suggested to satisfy "keen" newspaper men, not the senators themselves.

Only the placing of additional documentary evidence in the record by the government, which put 13 witnesses on the stand Friday, will remain to be completed before the defense starts its presentation.

Most of the government testimony was of a routine nature, adduced to show that Stewart was under proper subpoena that the oil committee was in regular session, and that the questions asked—whether Stewart had any knowledge of anyone receiving any of the liberty bond profits of the Continental transactions or had discussed the deal with Harry F. Sinclair—were pertinent to the investigation being pursued.

Justice Frederick L. Siddons, who is hearing the case, has indicated he probably would be to rule as to the pertinency of the questions and he made a point to find out for his own satisfaction when Chairman Nye and Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, were on the stand for the government, whether the senate committee was in regular session when the Indiana Standard Oil official was before it.

Stewart is charged with a misdemeanor in refusing to answer the two questions and his indictment mentions four counts, one for each refusal in February 2 and his repeated refusals February 3.

Sinclair's appeal from a sentence of three months in jail and a $500 fine of similar charges, handed down March 10, 1927, is up for action this week in the District of Columbia court of appeals. There was some indication tonight that the decision would be announced within a few days.

U. D. C. CROSS GOES TO ENGLISH WOMAN

Nashville, Tenn., June 3.—(AP)—A woman now famous in two continents for the work of her husband, Sir Wilfred Grenfell, Labrador missionary and explorer, 2 was awarded the Southern Cross of Honor today from the General William B. Bate chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. The cross, designed for Lady Ann McClanahan Grenfell, of Labrador, was received by her nephew, William Fitzgerald, of Nashville, grandson of Captain E. Burk McClanahan, Confederate memorial services honoring the birthday of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy.

FLORIDANS CLOSE HEATED PRIMARY

Jacksonville, Fla., June 3.—(AP)—The great American institution—politics—moved to the center of the stage in Florida tonight as lines were tightened for the storm of ballots expected in Tuesday's democratic primary election.

With contests waged in virtually every county, registrations have mounted to the point in some places where extra inspectors have been found necessary to accommodate the qualified voters due to the lengthy ticket—one of the longest on record. Indications are, in the opinion of veteran observers, that the heaviest vote in history will be polled, providing the weather is favorable.

The airplane, a circus callopie and a "fiver" automobile christened "The Spirit of Florida" have figured in these campaigns in addition to the ordinary means of transportation and electioneering ballyhoo.

State Senator John S. Taylor, of Largo, running in a five-cornered race for governor against Doyle E. Carlton, of Tampa; James M. Carson, Miami; Sydney J. Catls, DeFuniak Springs, former governor, and Fous Hathaway, Jacksonville, chairman of the state road department, will be the aircraft in much of his travels over the state.

The callopie was brought into play by Catls in his second successive attempt at a "comeback."

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, who is seeking to unseat Congressman W. J. Sears in the fourth district, used "The Spirit of Florida," in which to make her campaign, covering approximately 8,000 miles. She was accompanied by her secretary and "transportation officer," both women.

Governor John W. Martin is opposing United States Senator Park Trammell for reelection, while in addition, Florida's delegation of 18 to the national convention, for which there are 63 candidates, is to be chosen and other state officers as well as two other congressional races settled.

PROMINENT SUMTER FARMER AMBUSHED

Americus, Ga., June 3.—Unknown assailants attacked and perhaps fatally wounded Jim Reeves, a well-known white farmer, late Saturday night on the river road near the farm of Neill A. Ray, who is chairman of the board of commissioners of Sumter county.

There were several persons in the party who attacked Reeves, the one who fired the shot being identified by the wounded man as a negro. One shot fired by his assailant penetrated Reeves' lung and produced a wound which may end in death. He is now at an American hospital and attending physicians say his condition is extremely critical.

With Reeves, when he was attacked, were his nephew, Preston Reeves, who resides with him, and his young son. The Reeves party were en route home when attacked and were engaged in repairing an automobile tire that had been damaged in a collision a few minutes previously. No cause has been assigned for the attack, it being said that the negro who shot Reeves fired deliberately without any previous altercation, the weapon failing to fire several times before it was finally discharged, the bullet finding lodgment in Reeves' lung.

It is believed the assailants had attended a negro barbecue and that Saturday night social a short distance from the scene of the attack and that Reeves' assailants were crazed with liquor when he was attacked.

Great New Play Center Planned In Chosewood Park in Third Ward

Projected development of the new Chosewood park in the third ward is shown in the above drawing by Chief of Construction William A. Hansell. Charles L. Chosewood, veteran member of the parks committee and a councilman representative from the third ward in whose honor the latest park development is named, and other members of the park committee, will push the project to rapid completion if present plans are consummated. Mr. Hansell and his department will cooperate.

Creation of one of the most modern and best equipped play centers in Atlanta and vicinity was projected Sunday by members of the Atlanta park committee to take the place of the old Chosewood park, which was sold to the Chevrolet Motor company.

Several months ago the city sold a 12-acre tract to the Chevrolet company and procured another about twice the size on South Boulevard. Charles L. Chosewood, a member of the parks committee in whose honor the old tract was named, will sponsor the improvement, which will also bear his name. He is a veteran member of city council from the third ward, and has been a member of the park committee for the past several years.

Playgrounds, wading pools, a community amphitheater, picnic groves, lawns, tennis courts, two baseball courts, two baseball diamonds, pony tracks and other amusement and recreation facilities will be provided in the new improvement if plans of Mr. Chosewood and the park committee are carried out.

The tentative plans were prepared by Chief of Construction William A. Hansell, who will cooperate with the park department in establishing one of the finest playgrounds in the city.

FARMERS CRY OUT AGAINST COOLIDGE

Wright City, Mo., June 3.—(AP)—

The fury of the farmers "scorned" by President Coolidge in his veto of the McNary-Haugen bill may be "devastating" to the republican party, President John F. Case, of the Missouri state board of agriculture, a republican, said in a statement here tonight.

"The president has a right to veto the bill," President Case said, "but criticism is due for the bitter and intemperate way he spoke in his veto message. He repeatedly intimated that the sincere and able men who fostered and fought for this measure are a group of morons. Either that or they tried to enact a 'vicious' law."

How many persons who have observed the workings of the tariff and understands that its primary object is to protect American industry can call a device intended to extend protection to the nation's biggest industry 'unconstitutional' is beyond us. The president, even in his recumbent position as to what kind of a bill he would sign, offered only a substitute of what he recommended upon the occasion of his former veto.

"The matter will not down. It must be fought out on the convention floors at Kansas City and Houston, Texas, and the final message will be written in when the farmers vote next November. 'Hell has no fury like a woman scorned,' Shakespeare once said. The republican party may find out that the fury of farmers scorned is devastating."

FARM COMMITTEE TO KANSAS CITY

Chicago, June 3.—(AP)—Nomination of a midwestern candidate for president and an agricultural plank that would make the tariff as effective for the farmer as for industry today were the goals sought by the corn belt farmers in the opinion of M. J. Tobin, a lawyer, of Vinona, Iowa.

Tobin, convenor of the recent Iowa state convention, was a leader in the meeting of 50 representatives of the farmers at Chicago Saturday. He termed the meeting a "voluntary farm committee" and said it was separate and distinct from the corn belt committee and from the movement to organize a "caravan of farmers" to march to Kansas city during the republican convention.

The aim of the voluntary farm committee, he said, was to bring together 300 or 400 farmers and business men representing the 14 midwestern states "who know their stuff and can talk with the eastern delegates."

LOWDEN MANAGER OFF TO BATTLE FIELD

Chicago, June 3.—(United News.) The midwest farm "revolt," now in definite form, began to move on to Kansas city today, where the corn belt farmer will demand that the republican party insert a relief plank in its convention platform and work for the nomination of a presidential candidate who will uphold it.

Lowden's campaign manager, Clarence Burk, left Chicago today for Kansas City, where headquarters will be opened Monday for the former Illinois governor. He left with the confidence that the midwest farmers would support Frank O. Lowden as their first choice for the republican presidential nomination.

Many of the delegates attending the meeting here Saturday expressed this sentiment, although Senator James E. Watson, Indiana; Vice President Charles G. Dawes, Senator Curtis, Kansas, and Senator Norris, Nebraska, were others mentioned as favored by the farmers.

rule of the five southeastern provinces. His armies have always had a reputation for good discipline. The other contingent is under Chang Tsung-Chung, a Shantung leader whose forces have never been noted for their orderly behavior.

The south China leaders do not wish to incorporate these troops in their victorious nationalist armies and they fear that an attempt to disarm them while their pay is several months in arrears, would lead to serious trouble.

Sun Chuan-Fang is understood to be in Peking. It was rumored here that he might attempt a coup d'etat there. Chang Tsung-Chung is at Tientsin. He is reported as disinclined to acquiesce quietly in the transfer of Peking to the southerners. The southern government officials therefore consider that these two men and their armed followers form a potential menace to peaceful administration of Peking and Tientsin.

CHINESE BANKERS PROTEST TO LEAGUE

Geneva, June 3.—(AP)—A protest from commercial banking and press organizations of China against the "Japanese invasion" of sections of that country, was filed here today with the League of Nations. The protest came on the eve of the 50th session of the council of the league, which opens tomorrow under the presidency of Aguerro Benavente, of Cuba.

Among the organizations signing the protest were the Chinese National Association of Chambers of Commerce of Shanghai, the Association of Chinese Banks, the Chinese Newspaper association, the Chinese Journalist union, and the Chinese Bankers Guild. The protest warned the league that unless justice is done to China, the league itself must bear a share of the blame for the consequences.

The businessmen's appeal was delivered personally to representatives of all nations on the council, including the Japanese delegates Adachi and Cheng Loh, who represents Peking, by Hsi Chi-Feng, who until two days ago was himself connected with the secretariat of the league.

The spokesman said that Japan was convinced that no good could be gained by a discussion, because of the uncertain situation at Peking, he added.

The protest charged Japan with disregarding the Washington treaty respecting China and the covenant of the League of Nations in that it had violated territorial integrity and political independence of the Chinese nation by sending military forces into Shantung. It added that the Mikado's government caused the deaths of thousands of innocent Chinese non-combatants and claimed that this accusation is confirmed by a statement in the recent Japanese communication to the league which said that Japanese troops never would kill a single non-resisting Chinese citizen.

"Would Japanese troops be allowed by the council of the League of Nations to kill Chinese who in self-defense, resist foreign invasion?" asked the protest.

"TWO BLACK CROWS" TO DRAW BIG CROWD

Interest in the appearance, at the Elmer theater next Wednesday night, of the "Two Black Crows," W. C. Fields, famous movie comedian, and other artists, is greater than in any similar attraction in several years, according to S. Russell Bridges, president of the Southern Musical Bureau, sponsor of the entertainment.

"All day Friday and Saturday both box offices, at Cable Piano company and Phillips and Crow Piano company, were busy and there is every indication that the house will be sold out before Wednesday," Mr. Bridges stated.

There are, however, a number of excellent seats left and the splendid architectural arrangement of the theater makes every seat in the house within comfortable sight and sound of the stage. Mr. Bridges pointed out. This is the first visit south of the famous "Black Crows," team of Moran and Mack, though there is hardly a home in Atlanta which has not one or more of their famous black face dialogue phonograph records.

Among the artists on the program will be Ruth Jones, former Metropolitan soprano, and Clifford O'Rourke, Irish tenor.

SYNOPSIS.

Old John Rybus, formerly a bookkeeper in London and later in Whitehall, is serving as a porter in an inn at Castle Craven when his son Conrad sees him there. He has been estranged from both his sons since the beginning of the war and they have lost track of him. Conrad happens to tell his brother, Probyn, that he has seen his father. Probyn's son, Lance Rybus, had believed his grandfather dead, but he looks him up at the Saracen's Head without telling his parents of the meeting. When Lance finishes at Cambridge he takes a room in London and after gaining his father's reluctant consent and a small allowance he devotes himself to writing. In London Lance meets and is attracted to Olive Gadsden, a stenographer.

Mary Morris, a friend of Old Rybus, takes care of a blind brother.

INSTALLMENT XLIII.

OLIVE GROWS ANGRY.
In crossing those wet fields under the gray sky and the dripping elms, Lance seemed to be walking with a lost self that had been recovered; and the fierce cheeriness of the craftsman became a sadness. Yes, had work hurt; it hurt you more than did bad living; for bad work, unless you were ruthless in destruction, remained like some castoff mistress exacting blackmail. And the virtue went out of you. The fine mirror of your consciousness became blurred and tarnished; the girdle of your restraint was loosened. Pausing by a field gate under an old beech he listened to the drippings from the leaves, while the soul of him reached out to life's essential mysticism. He began to feel things understandingly, for mysticism is knowing by feeling, and life is revealed and carried on by every man feeling things afresh. The great simplicities recur and are eternal.

Lance felt cooled and calm by the rain. The gray landscape regained its beauty. He walked on to the village, bought his cigarettes, and returned to the island with a wet head and a secret serenity. He felt strangely gentle towards life, and to that peace of life under the green canopy of the punt. Poor Olive! He had become conscious of the futile crudeness of the affair, and of the damage such an affair inflicted. It cut away your ideals, it blurred your vision; it tricked you into accepting easy, casual things. Was it not true that his plunging into a false realism had begun with this sex adventure?

He hesitated for a moment on the top of the bank. The ending of such an intimacy was no easy matter, and with this sudden feeling of gentleness possessing him, he even doubted for a moment how you ended such an affair. Or did it end itself? Yet there was a ruthlessness in him that cried out that it would have to be ended. He wanted to get back to work—the real work. He was in a growing effort to efface that butchery phase. The mood of his gentleness would change into impatience, and haste. It cost him an effort to slither to the bank, and raise the canvas flap.

She met him with her actress' smile. "Oh, boy, you are clever!" She waved a white flag that was his manuscript. "Well—and clever. What a mop of a head! But, say, a girl's got to be a yeller." He climbed in with a very serious and unsmiling face.

"Like it?" "It's lovely. But you're cruel. You do take people off. I'm really—awful scared of you." Extracting the box of cigarettes from a mackintosh pocket, he tossed to her, but without looking at her face. "So—it strikes you—as good?" "Topping. Of course, it's a bit so-so, but that's just what people like. Even the old ladies love being shocked, the old bunnies. But where did you learn it all?"

"How do you mean?" "Why—how do you know about such things? If you had asked me I should have said that some quite priceless person of 40 had written it. Some raffish old blighter."

"Yes, a seedy old blighter with all the paint worn off him. I get you, my dear. But—the seedy old blighters are apt to be sentimental. Some young thing of these and twentys. Some young stuff. Grouching, but the rain has got right down my back."

On that Sunday morning, Lance woke very early. The rain had not ceased, for he could hear the drip of it on the canvas from the boughs of the older trees, and for awhile he lay and listened to it. But presently, being full of the wakefulness of a new inspiration, he slipped a hand under the canvas and raising it until it was clear of the punt's gunwale, he looked at the river. He saw it as a sheet of gray water spreading beyond the green opening of the backwater, with dim beech woods rising beyond it. Everything was smirched by rain. And yet, as he lay on his side and looked long and steadily at the water and the woods, he knew things had come back to him. By mutual consent they returned to town by an afternoon train. They sat opposite ends of the carriage and looked out of opposite windows, for there was a constraint between them, and the gray chill of the river dawn seemed to linger. They were alone together, yet not alone, while very conscious of each other. If he scented absorbed in the wet landscape and his own thoughts, she from her corner—threw an occasional glance at his half-averted profile and his willful preoccupation. She was angry. Men were so much of a mischief, so fickle, so inconsistent, and though she was vaguely aware of him as a winged Mercury poised for an upward flight, she still wished to hold him, because—in a way he had been here. Cold, clean, ruthless, soaring youth! For, somehow, figure in Pevsley's Circus, so alive though so motionless above the chaotic crowd.

But as the train neared Paddington, she slipped across to him, and put her chin upon his shoulder. "Ray—what's the matter?" "Nothing. I was thinking something out."

"Awful serious fellow! What about it?" His reply was abrupt. "Work, my dear—much work. It is living up in me. I have got just five weeks left."

"What for?" "For the book. I've promised it for the end of September. It will have to be done."

"She withdrew herself. "That's the sort of thing, my dear, a man says to his wife. At No. 7 Parham Crescent a sympathetic and inquisitive Mrs. Gasson brought Olive up her tea. She placed the tray on the table by the window and turned to watch the girl who, seated on the edge of her bed, was changing her stockings. Olive had come in with a thin, peaked face, and weathered her stockings. Obviously, the weather had not been kind to the lovers, but Mrs. Gasson could recall days in her own youth when hailstones and hurricanes would not have mattered.

"Now, you drink your tea, dearie," Olive tossed her discarded stockings into a corner. "Filthy weather. I've not a pair of stockings either. I've not a pair of stockings either."

"There, dearie, you've been quarreling. You drink a cup of nice hot tea. Nothing like it. A cup of tea is saved me from suicide many a time." She went to pour it out, added two lumps of sugar, and carried the cup to the girl.

"Such weather! Enough to damp a blooming Venus. Wasn't he loving, dearie? Men get such moods of love, stirring the sugar in the cup."

"Feeling like that, are you, dearie?" "He's got me cussed." Mrs. Gasson stood with her red hands folded over her bosom. "That's to say—you'll marry him, dearie?"

"I shall. Perhaps you know what it is to feel cussed about a man?" "Well," said the lady, "I do and I don't. But I wouldn't spite myself for a man, dearie. You'll be a boy like him. If I was out for the white satin and the orange blossom, I'd take some one older and with a bit of money. Now, you try and eat a piece of plum cake, dearie. I wouldn't get cussed if I were you. Men ain't worth it."

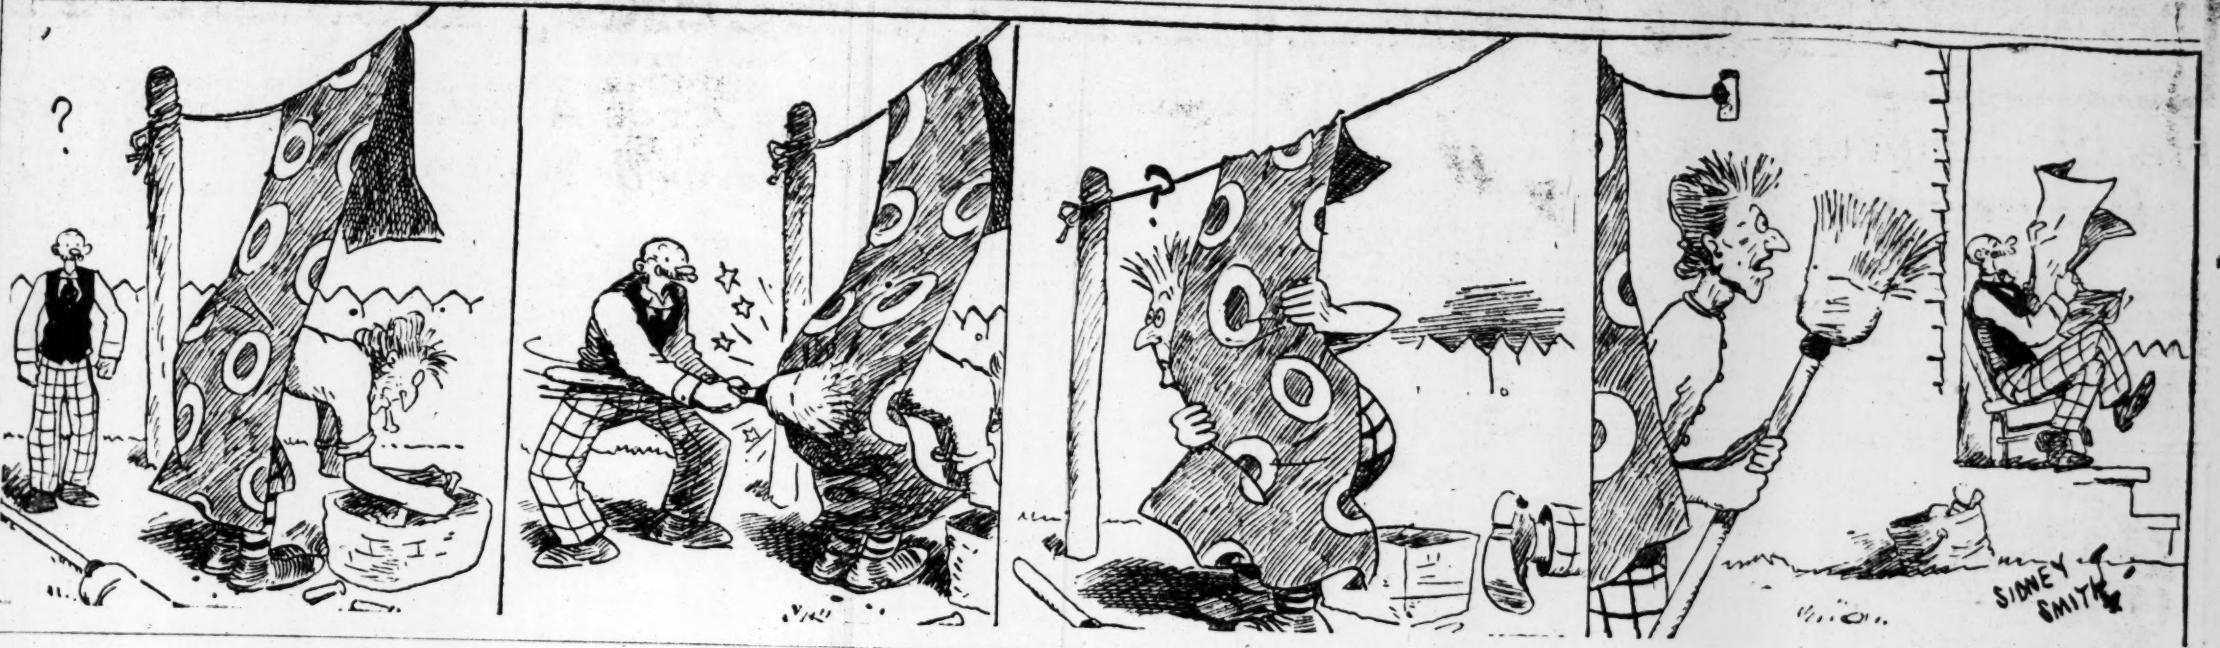

Men ain't worth it. (Copyright, 1928, for The Constitution.)

2,000 Fans Watch Match At East Lake

Scotch Foursome Proves Highly Interesting; Staged for D. A. V. Fund.

BY WHITNEY CARY.
Scotch foursomes, feminine golf and the fund for the disabled veterans of the world were the main features of the match Sunday afternoon at East Lake when Mrs. Dalton Raymond, 1927 southern champion, paired with Bobby Jones, finished all square against Miss Marion Turpie, present Dixie title holder, and Watts Gunn, an 18-hole exhibition two-ball foursome that will long live in the minds of the 2,000 enthusiastic golfing fans, who had gathered at East Lake for the match.

It was an exhibition that carried every element of the dramatic. A match that saw each side turn in a card of 78 and which was as near a tie as the Scotch foursome, the match was a triumph for the fund for the disabled veterans of the world.

Those who had gone to East Lake to see two great feminine golf players were not disappointed. Both Miss Turpie and Mrs. Raymond, who had been playing together for years, had a brand of golf that was a delight to the gallery, even as it was a challenge to the players. The match was a triumph for the fund for the disabled veterans of the world.

But while the credit must be given to the golf as exhibited by Mrs. Raymond and Miss Turpie, the real reason for the match was the fund for the disabled veterans of the world. The match was a triumph for the fund for the disabled veterans of the world.

Probably the most sensational shot of the match was the one made by Mrs. Raymond on the 13th hole. The shot was a triumph for the fund for the disabled veterans of the world.

This great shot of Bobby's was followed by a brilliant shot of his own. The shot was a triumph for the fund for the disabled veterans of the world.

The match was a triumph for the fund for the disabled veterans of the world. The match was a triumph for the fund for the disabled veterans of the world.

Scotch Foursomes.

Being American by the accident of birth and the subsequent eventualities of choice we usually hesitate to recommend anything fundamentally foreign as being superior to home products but after witnessing the Scotch foursome at East Lake Sunday afternoon we cannot refrain from advocating Scotch foursomes for any and all occasions.

The match, which featured Bob Jones and Mrs. Dalton Raymond against Watts Gunn and Marion Turpie, ended all even and not a member of the huge gallery will argue that the match was not of gripping interest throughout.

It was of far greater interest than it would have been if four balls had been in play instead of two.

The Scotch foursome should be played more by ordinary golfers. There are many reasons for this assertion. In the first place the two-ball foursome is fundamentally the only type of partnership play. When each member of a foursome is playing an individual ball the question of partnership is entirely overshadowed by the question of individual prowess.

It becomes a contest of four individuals rather than a contest of two partners against two others. From the standpoint of instruction to the players the Scotch foursome is far and away the best type for the duffer or the star.

There are several reasons for this. In the first place any man will be recovered by another rather than himself. He is also likely to get practice on shots that he very seldom has when he is playing his golf all the way.

Just for example. On the 13th hole in their match Sunday Mrs. Raymond almost missed her drive and it happened to the deep rough to the right of the tee and not more than 50 yards nearer the green. The ball was in an uncultivated strip of rank grass and completely buried under sight. The referee had to part the grass to give Bob a look at the ball. Robert played a beautiful shot from the terrible lie but that is not the story. The story lies in the fact that Bob had to play a shot he never would have to play if his own tee shot had preceded it.

The same thing happened many times Sunday on each side. The Scotch foursome furnishes experience which can not come from a four-ball match.

Another argument in favor of the ancient type of partnership match is its speed. On Saturday and Sunday when the courses are crowded to capacity the Scotch foursome method would cut down the congestion very greatly.

More Scotch foursomes should be played. They present a type of sport not to be found in the four-ball match and have other advantages in addition.

2 Clubs Withdraw From Loop.

Richmond, Va., June 3.—(AP)—The Times Dispatch tomorrow will say that the Richmond and Petersburg clubs have withdrawn from the Virginia league because of lack of support and that a two-week series between the Richmond and Norfolk clubs has been arranged pending negotiations to place the two remaining clubs in another league, the name of which was not disclosed.

The Richmond and Norfolk clubs, it is pointed out, strengthened by the withdrawal of the Richmond club, will begin a week's series here tomorrow afternoon with the Norfolk club. The two remaining clubs in the league, the name of which was not disclosed, will play a two-week series between the Richmond and Norfolk clubs.

The article will say that as a result of the situation 28 ball players were released.

Her 11 found the carpet and as Mrs. Raymond's drive landed in the trap the Gunn-Turpie force forged ahead. A half at number 12 and then the Gunn-Turpie second was two up on the 11th. It was the last time that Mrs. Raymond and Miss Turpie found trouble on the very few occasions. Especially was this true of Miss Turpie, whose accurate driving helped her to get splendid hits for his line, outdrive the southern champion in the Gunn-Turpie match.

Some idea of the good shooting done by these feminine stars may be gained by the fact that the back tees were used and the foursome showed par 72 course on which the putting greens were far from fast.

The cards follow:

Gunn-Turpie—Out ..... 444 445 445-38

Barons Add To Southern League Lead

Birmingham Enjoys Big Week; Wins 6 Out of 9 Games.

Memphis, Tenn., June 3.—(AP)—Birmingham's pennant hopes received added impetus the past week, the Barons clouting out 116 hits good for 78 runs in nine games, including those of today, winning two-thirds of them. Their opponents scored only 47 runs. The Southern association schedule was interfered with by postponements and cut short some teams registered a total of 509 hits, which combined with 88 errors, were good for 227 runs.

Scoring only 14 and 18 runs, respectively, Memphis and New Orleans participated in only two of the nine games. Little Rock played the Pelicans four times, winning three and losing one. Chattanooga won two of four shutouts, three were recipients of Mobile and one by Memphis.

The regular schedule without interruption was the stingiest, with only 20 runs scored in the nine games. Chattanooga was the most liberal, giving away 81 runs, 30 more than they scored themselves.

Chattanooga, which has been at the top of the field since the beginning of the season, did not live up to its reputation during the week, committing 20 errors. Memphis in three games made only one error.

With their grand total of 116 hits, Birmingham took 28 safe bingles in nine games. The Barons were good in the field, committing only 11 errors in nine games. The Barons led in the batting average, with a .310 average.

EASING OFF MARKS
WEEK IN BONDS

New York, June 3.—(AP)—The bond market eased off last week under the influence of high money rates, with the general list, except for a few issues, closing at lower levels.

Added to the depressing influence of the highest money rates in several years was the continued hesitancy of traders to increase commitments, the greater attraction of the stock market and the usual month-end liquidation.

United States government obligations were particularly under pressure, but the softening tendency was evident in all sections of the list and only a few convertibles and semi-speculative issues showed any indication of strength.

New offerings showed a substantial gain over the previous week, totaling $80,123,000 as compared with $56,408,332 last week and $79,118,000 for the corresponding week a year ago.

Dodge Brothers Debenture is stood out, the issue gaining about 7 points on buying inspired by announcement of a merger with the Chrysler Corporation.

American Bell Sugar Debenture, R. F. Goodrich 4 1/2 per cent, Pierce Arrow Debenture 8s also advanced, the latter on reports of a pending merger with Jordan. Some demand was evident early in the week for Sinclair Pipe Line 5s.

There were few strong spots in the railroad group, most rails being under pressure which reflected divergence of opinion over the future of consolidation proposals. Iowa Central Refunding 4s, Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville 4s and Chicago and North-western 6 1/2s were prominent among the few to advance.

The foreign list barely held steady and most price changes were limited. Australia 4 1/2s slumped under liquidation and some Latin American issues moved to lower levels.

U. S. government obligations also moved to lower levels with little buying in evidence. Traders are expecting an announcement during the coming week of new treasury financing, believing it will take the form of a short-term offering.

New offerings next week probably will be heavy generally, for early indications point to a total in excess of $100,000,000. Heading the list is a public offering Monday of $28,000,000 Federal Land Bank 4 per cent bonds priced at 100 1/8 and interest to yield 3.98 to 4 per cent. A group headed by Brown Brothers & Co. is expected to make public offerings of $8,000,000 Hamburg Elevated, Under-land and Street Railways Co. 10 per cent 5 1/2 per cent bonds. Harris, Forbes & Co. will offer Tuesday $1,000,000 International Securities Corporation of America 5 per cent gold debentures.

Another foreign utility bond offering will come Monday in the form of $5,000,000 Brandenburg Electric Power Co. 6 per cent bonds, proceeds to be used in financing expansion projects. Other offerings include: $4,500,000 Rockland Light and Power company refunding mortgage 4 1/2 per cent bonds; Northern Utilities company first lien 6 per cent bonds for a total of $3,250,000 and 6 1/2 per cent sinking fund gold debentures totaling $1,700,000, and $3,500,000 Steuben Building first mortgage fee 6 per cent sinking fund bonds.

The Bancitally Mortgage company has been called for redemption July 1, $5,000,000 face amount of its 5 1/2 per cent bonds now outstanding.

125,000 GERMANS
PARADE TO SHOW
FIGHTING SPIRIT

Hamburg, Germany, June 3.—(AP)—In a display of strength of the nationalist organization known as "The Steel Helmets," 125,000 men were mustered here today as a climax to the convention of the organization. The city park resembled a vast army camp.

A storm of "hoops" greeted the arrival of the commander in chief of the confederated organizations and members of his staff from all parts of Germany.

The muster started with addresses by Protestant and Roman Catholic clergy. After the commander in chief had read his annual message to his forces, they were drawn up in military array and reviewed by the staff.

Galveston, Tex., June 3.—(AP)—Representing the United States and ten foreign countries were paraded along two miles of beach fronting the grand hotel here today before an audience of 100,000 people. It was the first official event of a pageant that will begin tonight with "Miss Universe."

The event is Galveston's third annual international pageant of pulchritude.

Private acreage estimates issued during the week figures the increase from 4 to 8 per cent, a sufficient difference of opinion to leave the trade in as much doubt as ever as to the final probable increase.

COTTON MARKET
WEEKLY REVIEW OF PAST WEEK

New Orleans, June 3.—(AP)—The cotton market was rather quiet during the past week although there have been some periods of activity. The memorial holiday of Wednesday, although not officially observed here, slowed down business materially during the middle of the week owing to the fact that the great majority of the markets of the country as well as the bureau of the government were closed, and the usual sources of news, weather or otherwise were shut off.

In the first days of the week the market was disposed to be firmer and owing to rains and cool weather in the eastern belt and the October position on Monday advanced to 20.45 or 21 points above the close of Saturday. Later in the week the weather became more favorable, particularly in the western belt and the weekly weather report issued Thursday morning having been omitted Wednesday.

On Friday a very favorable private crop summary was issued from Dallas, Texas, which added to the easier tone and induced considerable liquidation. On this break October traded down to 19.97 or 48 points below the high point of Monday.

Rather liberal rains in all parts of the belt over Friday night caused a rally of 37 points from Friday low and although all of this gain was not retained the close at 20.22 represented a net gain of 25 points over the day's low point. Compared with Saturday a week ago the close showed a net gain of 25 points over the day's low point.

Private acreage estimates issued during the week figures the increase from 4 to 8 per cent, a sufficient difference of opinion to leave the trade in as much doubt as ever as to the final probable increase.

RESUMES JUNE 12

New York, June 3.—(AP)—Except for the usual seasonal readjustments, there was no great change in the business situation last week. Crops and retail trade began to show signs of improvement on the approach of summer, but industry generally continued to develop irregularities. While comparisons to date with last year have been generally unfavorable, current prospects appear better than those of a year ago.

Freight traffic continues below the corresponding periods of 1927 and 1928, but there is a growing tendency to attribute this, in part, to the increase in motor truck transportation. Railroad earnings, however, show a marked improvement in operating results. Adjustment of congressional clearings, reported by the weekly mercantile reviews, were below those of the previous week, due to the observance of the holiday last Wednesday, and also about 1.5 per cent below the corresponding week last year, which was a holiday week last year.

Settlement period not covered in the same week this year. The daily average of clearings in 1928 is about nearly 30 per cent above that of the same period last year.

Activity in the steel industry has been well sustained here today, when season declines usually set in. Operations in the Chicago district were maintaining above 90 per cent of capacity, while production in eastern centers averaged around 75 per cent. New business has been less satisfactory, due to disappointing railroad and oil company purchases. Structural demands continue good. Heavy melting steel scrap sold in the Birmingham district last week for $10 a ton, the lowest price in years.

The announcement of the Chrysler-Dodge Motor, which was the outstanding development of the week in the automotive industry. It immediately set in motion a flock of rumors of new consolidations, which were undoubtedly well carried through before the end of the year. Employment in the automobile centers continues at a high level, with the plants employing the largest number of persons in history. General Motors, Chrysler, Packard, Buick and other manufacturers report record-breaking May production.

Oil production showed a slight increase last week after several successive decreases, but output is well below a year ago. Gasoline consumption continues at record-breaking levels.

Backward weather has had a restraining influence on textile production and the hurt to the demand for textile goods is apparent. Textile staples are in excess of unfilled orders and the silk industry has curtailed operations after a favorable spring.

Further depletion of the country's gold reserves, through exports last week, were accompanied by a rising of credit, which appeared to be aimed primarily at speculation in securities and commodities.

Both Dun and Bradstreet reported that commercial failures in May were slightly larger than in April and in May of last year, but that the volume of business was below April and that for the first time in any May, but that liabilities of $38,119,000 were paid, or 41.2 per cent below those of last May.
